DISCOVER A RARE BREED

EVEN TODAY THE CLOUDED LEOPARD
HAS AN AIR OF MYSTERY SURROUNDING IT

INTRO

In Borneo, a land some 7,000 miles away from the UK, roams the clouded leopard, an animal of great stealth and beauty. Even today the clouded leopard has an air of mystery surrounding it; we know remarkably little about this animal apart from the fact that it is a completely different species of animal to all other types of Leopard.

But we do know that like most other cats the Clouded Leopard has whiskers.

Our tea, which has been drunk by native Malaysians since time immemorial, is called Misai Kuching by the locals. This means 'the cats whiskers'. The tea was given this name because the Java tea plant has stems coming out of its main stalk which look like cats whiskers. You can see what we mean from the photo's of the Java tea plant taken in our farm in Kulah Pilah Malaysia.

We think that the Clouded Leopard and our Java Tea have a lot in common. Not only do they both come from exotic Malaysia but both have cat's whiskers and both bring great pleasure. The clouded leopard brings pleasure through its beauty and mystery; Java Tea will bring you pleasure through its unique and delicate taste and its health benefits.

ORIGINS

Kuching Herbal Java tea is grown on our farm in the rural district of Kuala Pilah, Negri Sembilan, Malaysia using only traditional and sustainable farming methods. We prepare our Java Tea using our own method which we have developed to ensure you get the best taste.

The leaves are first dried and then milled before being packed into tea-bags. We do this quickly to maintain the fresh fragrance and delicate flavour. You'll be pleased to know there are no nasties that are added. It is 100% Java Tea.

We use workers from the local community to pick the leaves of our Java Tea plants and we insist our workers are paid fair wages!

We care about our planet and we do all that we can to ensure that we do no damage to it. For example we use the least packaging possible, and use recycled packing materials.
